

HOW TO TELL A GOOD TRUNK

Some trunks are dove-tailed and glued, some nailed, but the best are riveted.

Note also the hinges.

Three or four hinges are better than two. Nearly all our trunks have four.

You can't always tell whether the trunk is made of wood or painted paper, or what kind of wood, but you can pick out carefully where you buy it. This is where the worth of a responsible dealer comes in.

For traveling you'll want a trunk you can live in, and live with, and which will be indifferent to baggage men's treatment, and bring your belongings safe home again.

Pretty stiff requirements, but our trunks have them and they cost but little money.

No danger of strewing your clothes at various stoppings along the road if you have one of our canvas covered, iron bound trunks, with four hinges, straps, and riveted together.

We also have a splendid line of suit cases, travelling bags, valises, steamer rugs, etc.

CAPTAIN HAMLET'S OFFICIAL REPORT

Captain O. C. Hamlet, commanding the revenue steamer Thetis, has made a very interesting report of his visit to the Island of Lisiansky, one of the Hawaiian group, where he rescued 77 Japanese subjects and brought them to Honolulu. He says: "The Thetis left Honolulu May 8, 1904, and on June 12 stopped at Laysan Island where we found an old schooner loading with guano. On the morning of the 14th we anchored off Midway. On the morning of the 16th the Island of Lisiansky was sighted and approaching it slowly along the coral reef to make a lee, anchored on the west side about three miles off shore shortly before 8 a. m. The ship's surgeon, an interpreter, a petty officer and a boat's crew were taken, and we landed about 9:20. When we landed two of the Japanese approached us timidly, but as soon as the interpreter told what our business was they called the rest to come up and all came rushing up. The leader or manager stated there were 77 of them and all were in good health. After a letter from the Japanese consul, which which was obtained from the officer at Honolulu, was read to them and they fully understood that all were to leave the island everyone wanted to shake hands with the surgeon, myself and crew, and they danced around like happy children to express their joy, which seemed genuine. We made at once for the camp about three-quarters of a mile off on the east side of the island and we found it to consist of four thatched-roof shacks, one about 20x20 feet, and also for storing food, one, 12x40 feet, for sleeping and also for storing food, one, 12x80 feet, for sleeping and storing and one, 12x40, used as a general cook house.

"Through the interpreter I was informed that they had been on short rations for some time and that there was only 600 pounds of rice and a few beans left, and that they had prepared to live on dried terne meat, quantities of which were shown to me. I soon made it plain to the manager that the sooner and quicker the transfer of the whole party of 77 was made to the ship, the better, so the rice was put in five bags we had brought with us and carried across the island and the first load and their baggage reached the vessel before noon. I sent a note to the executive officer to use what boats he could during the afternoon to continue the transfer. I remained at the camp with the interpreter and two of the crew to see the things packed up and moved, and the manager allowed the 61 men remaining to cook all they could to eat for the midday meal. Fires under three large pots in the cook house were soon started and the rice, the remaining beans and some fresh fish were quickly prepared.

"Chop sticks had either fallen into disuse during the short ration period or the men had been in the habit of all eating at one time for dozens of pairs of sticks had to be improvised for this last meal. I was offered some of the food, found it very palatable and ate it to the sport and enjoyment of all the camp. All had a good meal and not more than half of what had been cooked was eaten. Some of what remained was carried across the island and eaten during the afternoon while they were waiting for the boats to come in. I asked what was to be done with the dried terne meat. They looked at it with some disgust and I was told that it was only provided against starvation and that no one would eat it now, and it was left at the camp.

"When I was informed and shown that there were several hundred packages of dried birds and wings, some being in large cases, I decided it was impossible to get them across the island to the ship in any reasonable time. So I told the manager to let them remain for the schooner to take and left a notice in Japanese on a board nailed to one of the shacks and in a box fastened to it a copy of the consul's letter and a full statement in regard to what had happened that day. The transfer of the men and their baggage was accomplished during the afternoon and the Thetis hove anchor and started back the same evening.

"We found that the island was very nearly as laid down on the charts about a mile long by three-quarters of a mile wide, covered all over with a tough grass growing by the black terns which have a habit of digging down for several inches to make their nests.

"A lookout station had been built by the Japanese on the east side of the island to attract attention of any passing vessel when the food supply was running short, and a white cloth had been hoisted at the top. This I left standing as it could do no harm.

"The weather on the cruise has been variable, sea mostly rough on account of the strong northeast wind, and the Japanese could not remain below decks at all. It made them sea-sick, and as they filled up the available space on deck I had to suspend quarters drills for the time they have been here. As soon as the Japanese are landed I shall at once set to work taking in coal and stores and get the vessel ready for the trip to Dutch Harbor, Alaska."

"Did you boys have a good time at your bonfire, Johnny?" "You bet we did. We burnt a backyard fence, half a dozen piano boxes, an' the most of old Squilligan's smoke-house, an' had a be-yootiful run when the police got after us."—Chicago Tribune.

HILO WILL GET THE BIG REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

vention here, to hold the next one in Hilo.

COULD MAKE CONVERTS.

William Aylett spoke strongly in favor of Hilo. The people on Hawaii generally knew nothing about a convention and to have one in their midst would be the making of converts. They would like to be talked to by malihinis from other islands, rather than by the kamaainas of their own districts. The Republicans were making converts on the big island and should receive help. The committee had already placed itself on record as favoring Hilo—in fact, had promised it to the Rainy City. If the committee went back on Hilo the consequence would be a defection in the party.

DON'T BREAK FAITH.

Treasurer A. J. Campbell said that in view of the action of the committee before favoring Hilo, it would be breaking faith with "our brothers in Hilo" if the committee did not vote for their town. The members of the party there had represented generally that the convention was to be held there and it would be a sort of slur on the party members on Hawaii if the plum went to Honolulu.

Geo. F. Renton thought the committee ought to vote for the good of the whole party and therefore hold the convention in Honolulu.

John C. Lane arose and spoke in favor of Hilo. He thought it would be a case of bad faith to break a partial agreement to go to Hilo.

BOYD CHANGED HIS MIND.

R. N. Boyd said that after listening to arguments he had changed his mind regarding the place for holding the convention. He withdrew his second to Mr. Gilman's motion and spoke against Hilo. Hawaii had got the worst of it in the Chicago deal and ought now to get the convention.

F. T. P. Waterhouse, of the Fifth District, said if the convention went to Hilo he and four others elected in his precinct could not attend. They would like to have had the convention place settled before the primary elections.

"If this convention goes to Hilo," said Mr. Gilman, "it will be a paper convention."

STRENGTHEN WEAK SPOTS.

Frank B. McStocker, late of Oahu, Hawaii, said the key-note had been struck when a speaker had said the best interests of the party should be considered. The best interests of the party, in his opinion, would be advanced if the convention went to Hilo.

"I think it is good politics that when you have a weak spot to strengthen it. The party is safe in Honolulu. Hawaii is not safe. The Republicans there do not seem to realize the necessity of cohesion and need to be taught. It would be a good idea to hold the convention there and boost them up. Let them see what the party is, and let them see how men here can put aside their own private interests in the interests, ground to advance the party's interests. It is the duty of a good party man to show that he will put himself to any trouble to advance the interests of his party. Men elected to office must accept the responsibilities of the office. If you decide you want to strengthen a weak spot, you cannot do better than by having the convention in Hilo."

FIFTH DISTRICT NEEDS.

National Committeeman Robertson said the point was what can do the most good for the party. The fighting ground was here on Oahu, in the Fifth District. He knew of no place needing strengthening more than the Fifth District. A convention in Hilo would probably be a paper convention. A convention would not do Hilo any good, but if a real lively Democratic convention were held in Honolulu it might do a whole lot of harm locally.

R. N. Boyd again spoke for Hilo. There was a faction around Hilo which needed to be harmonized and the convention would do the trick. The convention would be like a circus, and would attract people from all over the island.

"My friend Gilman here," said Col. Parker, "told me, when I was running for Delegate to Congress, that Hawaii was all right. He said, 'You stop here, Sam,' and I have stopped here ever since. I didn't get to Congress, because Hawaii went back on us. Therefore I say go to Hilo."

HOW MEMBERS VOTED.

The following is the vote taken by the members present and by proxy:
Hilo—McStocker, Walker, Williams, Maguire, Parker, Hayselden, Watkins, Crabbe, Hoogs, King, Fisher, Willard, Henry, 13.

Honolulu—H. H. Renton, H. P. Baldwin, J. W. Jones, G. F. Renton, Pahia, Vida, W. W. Goodale, Rice, 8.

RATIFICATION MEETING.

Chairman Crabbe then called attention to the fact that Governor Carter would arrive here next Friday, and as delegates to the Chicago Convention Robertson and Hoogs had already returned a ratification meeting should be held on Saturday, August 13. A committee had been appointed to look after a hall, etc. The Orpheum had been selected and the speakers, as named above, would be on the platform.

Among those present at the meeting were Chairman Crabbe, Secretary W. H. Hoogs, National Committeeman Robertson, Delegate Kuhio, Col. Sam Parker, Treasurer Campbell, Henry Vida, R. N. Boyd, Wm. Aylett, T. McCants Stewart, John C. Lane, Norman Watkins, Geo. F. Renton, J. A. Gilman, Wm. Henry.
